L. Michael Hall is a visionary leader in the field of Neuro-Semantics and today works as an entrepreneur, researcher/modeler, and international trainer. His doctorate is in the Cognitive-Behavioral sciences from Union Institute University. He worked as a psychotherapist in Colorado when he found NLP in 1986. He then studied with Richard Bandler and wrote several books for him. When studying and modeling resilience, he developed the Meta-States model (1994). Soon he began traveling nationally and then internationally, co-created the field of Neuro-Semantics with Dr. Bob Bodenhamer. The International Society of Neuro-Semantics (ISNS) was established in 1996. As a prolific writer, Michael has written more than 30 books, many best sellers in the field of NLP. Michael first applied NLP to coaching in 1991, but didn't create the beginnings of Neuro-Semantic Coaching until 2001 when together with Michelle Duval co-created Meta-Coaching trainings. In 2003, the Meta-Coach Foundation was created.
